

GERMAN CABINET CHANGES

SEVERAL MORE MINISTERS UNEASY IN THEIR PLACES.

It is thought the Old, friendly tie between Germany and Russia will be restored—Neurath Agate Attacks Biarmi—The Anniversary of Hans Sach's Birthday to be Brilliantly Celebrated.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—The Kritische Zeitung, announces the resignation of Dr. von Schelling, Minister of Justice. He will retain his post until Dec. 12, however, and thus complete his fifth year in the State service. Even with this change the Cabinet will not be really settled. Dr. von Bockstecher, Secretary of the Interior, and Freiherr von Biebrich, Minister of Commerce, are shifting uneasily in their places, and may go at any time. Both have offered to retire, but were requested by the Emperor, who fears to disquiet the country with more political sensations, to defer all action for the present.

On Friday the Emperor had a long conference with Prince Hohenlohe and Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein, as to minor appointments, but he reached no decision. Probably Freiherr von Vilamowitz, Governor of Posen, will succeed Herr von Heyden in the Ministry of Agriculture, and Herr von Puttkamer, now Imperial Secretary of the Reichsland, will accept the post left vacant by Herr von Koellner's removal to Berlin. It has been reported that Freiherr von Hammerstein, a Tory reactionist, might succeed Kosler. This has aroused the apprehensions of the Liberals who think it would prove the reactionary tendency of the new Cabinet. Prince Hohenlohe has nominated Capt. Count Schenck von Wiesenthal, a Catholic member of the old Prussian family, and a relative of the Chancellor, by marriage, to be his aide. The other changes under consideration include the creation of a Minister of Colonies, and the appointment of Dr. Miquel to be Vice-Chancellor.

The latter step is taken to relieve Prince Hohenlohe of any conspicuous part in the parliamentary debates. Whatever the arrangement, however, Miquel will remain Prussian Finance Minister.

The personnel of the Chancellery and Foreign Office is in the midst of an overhauling.

Resignations and transfers are the order of the day. Until quiet is restored in both departments, the Government will be at a great disadvantage; hence the postponement of the opening of the Reichstag. Had the Deputies met at the middle of this month, as at first arranged, they would have found the Government in an embarrassing state of solution.

The first Prussian Cabinet council in which the new Chancellor and Premier presided was held on Wednesday. Koellner and Marschall, the two other new members, were present, while the full force of older ministers, but, in view of the importance of the occasion, of a large number of the legislative programme was avoided.

What the policy of the new Government will be can only be surmised. The retention of Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein is taken to mean the continuance of Count von Caprivi's policy of reciprocity treaties. Koellner's advent is supposed to imply stricter repressive measures against the social democrats.

Koellner, the Radical leader, is already at his familiar business of exposing the baseness of the Emperor's selections. His Friedenszeitung (Friendship) is to be published again.

He attacks, and repudiates his ultra-conservative epigrams, such as "The Government ought to protect the people from their own folly." Koellner's friends say that he has learned much since he talked in this strain, that he now appreciates his Tory prejudices, and that he is a firm and determined adherent of an administrator.

The Clerical party, a relatively small amount of satisfaction from his appointment, and cause his attitude toward the Catholic Church is not that of an extremist. He, like his Cardinal brother, is an opponent of the Pope's policies in the temporal power, and disengages of the Pope's foreign policy in general.

Poles like so many straws in a wagon and then order his hired soldiers to crush them. In 1861, when the Southern and Western Railroad was starving and must fall, he sent them to the starving Czar ordered out his soldiers who shot them down like dogs. Rich Russians, and stamping out the men, then down with them, they ought to be killed like brutes. As for Nicholas, he may promise fair fame, but what is the use of war? Mr. Gordon spoke in part as follows:

"I am little embarrassed today in addressing you. I don't know whether to praise God or thank the Devil for the death of the Czar. I am used to speak in tongues.

I am used to speak in all the Czars. We have
